Using Quantitative and Qualitative Approaches to Understand Racial Disparities in Adult Vaccination, October, No. 10, 1052

Variations in Breast Cancer Screening and Health Behaviors by Age and Race Among Attendees of Women's Health Clinics, June, No. 6, 528

Once again, we come to the end of another successful year for JNMA, and on behalf of the editorial staff and board as well as the entire National Medical Association, we would like to express our sincere gratitude for the multitude of outstanding reviewers who have made this possible. JNMA is the nation's leading journal on minority health and diseases of disparity thanks in large measure to the enormous effort devoted to the peer review process by our panel of more than 2500 peer reviewers. We would like to pay a special tribute to our outstanding panel of statisticians headed by Gregory Gilbert and Dr. Rebecca Boehm McNeil, who initiated a program in August 2008 to provide a statistical review of every data-driven manuscript submitted to JNMA. This will insure that only the highest quality of manuscripts will be published in JNMA while synchronously assisting authors in designing better studies and writing better manuscripts going forward. Finally, I would like to personally thank Angelique Valladares, Sandra Haynes and Colleen Gratzter for the yeoman's job that they have done this past year under the most trying of circumstances. We certainly look forward to your ongoing support, suggestions and recommendations as to how to continue to improve the overall quality of JNMA, and we wish everyone a safe and joyous holiday season.
